RE: Raptor Nest Survey Notice

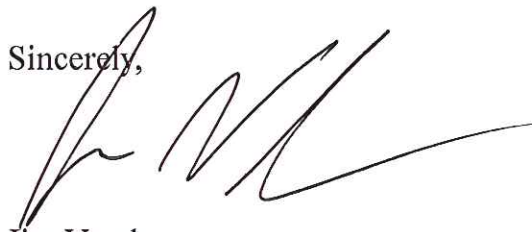

Ridgeline Energy is currently working on the development of a wind energy project on state and private ranch land in Southern Albany County Wyoming. This project with a maximum of 66 turbine sites is located on benches and ridges that flank Sand Creek.

Over the past few years we have been researching the viability of a wind farm in this area and evaluating the potential environmental conflicts with wildlife, cultural historic sites and other existing land uses. We are now at the point where it appears that most conflicts can be addressed to minimize impact and we are conducting specific studies to confirm this.

Part of this analysis includes surveying the area detailing the location of Golden Eagle and other raptor nests both on the project and within five miles of the boundary. The contractor conducting this work is planning to do the aerial surveys for 2 days the week of May 2nd, weather dependent. This study has been designed in close consultation with the US Fish and Wildlife Service and other state and federal land and wildlife agencies. During this time, you may encounter helicopters transecting the area. The survey flight paths will be at an elevation of 300 ft above the surface with a strong consideration to the sensitivity of homes and livestock. In some limited cases the crew may come to within 150ft from the ground. We hope this won't cause any inconvenience or concern, and if you have any questions, please don't hesitate to call.

We will also be hosting public meetings this summer as part of our permit public scoping and invite the associations input and participation so everyone is adequately informed about this project. Meanwhile, if you have any questions, please feel free to call myself, or our local representative, Jodi Guerin. I've included both of our phone numbers below and we are happy to visit with you at your convenience.

Sincerely,
